

Nikita the Red Eyes a Voyage

OSLO, Norway (AP)—Soviet Premier Khrushchev offered today to go along on the next Kon-Tiki expedition as a cook.

"I must have that offer in writing," said Thor Heyerdahl, the Norwegian explorer who led the expedition across the Pacific on a balsa wood raft.

"I had not been planning another raft expedition," Heyerdahl told Khrushchev, "but I am willing to organize one on that condition."

Khrushchev nodded gravely.

"I am willing to sail with you on the raft," he said, "but I warn you that I am not a good cook."

"That doesn't matter," Heyerdahl replied, "just bring along lots of Russian caviar."

Khrushchev, his wife and other members of his party inspected Heyerdahl's raft at a museum just outside Oslo.

"Khrushchev was surprisingly well-informed about the expedition," Heyerdahl said later.

'MR. X' IS OUT — Fred Steen, the "Mr. X" to whom Times-Mirror readers donated over $900 some months ago, was released from Warren General Hospital today. Here James Torrance of Warren National Bank presents the money to Steen. Steen says he plans to go back to the potato farm where he was working when he was hurt in an auto accident in January, and after recuperating, will go home in Louisiana. Steen said he is most grateful to everyone in Warren who was so helpful during his illness.

Civil Rights Measure Is Signed; Johnson Calls for Co-operation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The civil rights bill is the law of the land today and civil rights groups immediately began testing whether its sweeping provisions against discrimination can break generations of racial barriers in North and South.

Three hours after the House sent the legislation to the White House Thursday, President Johnson signed it with an appeal to all Americans to "join this effort to bring justice and hope to all our people."

From the South came indications the new law's constitutionality will be quickly challenged. Mississippi Gov. Paul Johnson cautioned that he expects "some real trouble" when Negroes seek to "desegregate public accommodations in that Deep South state."

CORRY — Hearings on the $130,000 lawsuit by the Thompson Maple Products Co. against the Citizens National Bank of Corry have been continued until Tuesday by Judge Elmer Evans in Erie County Court.

Thompson's suit against the bank seeks to prove the bank was negligent in cashing checks for Emory Albers of Spartansburg, logging contractor who sold to the Thompson mill.

Albers pleaded guilty two years ago to four counts of forgery in connection with checks the bank had cashed for him on which he had forged the names of other loggers dealing with the mill.

ERIE — If an easy access route to the Peninsula is ever undertaken, it will cost from $10 to $15 million.

Edward Mentz, secretary of the East Access Association, said the cost will depend on whether or not the access is by tunnel or bridge, the lesser cost being the tunnel.

Study of the access route, which is to begin at once, will cost $122,278 and take about a year to complete.

Senate Puts Off Battle Over Consular Treaty

By ERNEST B. VACCARO

WASHINGTON (AP) — Administration leaders in the Senate have decided to put off a partisan fight this election year over the newly negotiated U.S.-Soviet consular treaty.

The agreement, for the opening of Soviet consular offices in cities like New York, Chicago and San Francisco in exchange for similar American offices in key Soviet cities, has already come under Republican fire.

The Democrats can't stop the Republicans from making the treaty a hot topic in a campaign attack on administration foreign policy. But they can prevent the use of public hearings by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee as an election year sounding board.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana and Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said today hearings on the treaty can't be held until next year in view of a tight schedule.

Among other things, the Soviets agree under the treaty to notify U.S. consular officers of the detention of American nationals within three days and accord access to them within four.

They will be sentenced at an unspecified date.

Frankly, it is no hardship. After being with people all day I enjoy getting home and taking it easy. On the weekend I make up for it and enjoy life with a lot of friends, mainly from outside the business. A favorite Saturday recreation is going to the races.

When "The Farmer's Daughter" started last season I had no idea how time-consuming it would prove. Sometimes I feel as if my life were being churned down a garbage disposal. That first season was particularly difficult because so many weekends had to be devoted to promotion trips. I've never talked so much about myself ever.

Dear Abby . . .

By ABIGAL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Were you serious when you asked your readers if they considered it "cheating" to use a dictionary and other reference books while working a crossword puzzle? Of course it's cheating! The whole idea of the crossword puzzle is to test you on how many words and their definitions you KNOW. Not how many of the answers you can find somewhere.

PLAYS FAIR

DEAR ABBY: Although I have never used (or owned) an X-Word dictionary in my many years of combat with the puzzles, I would not consider it "cheating" to use one if necessary. After all, the word you look up today, you may remember tomorrow. I think most, if not all, puzzlers aspire to work out the solution without book reference. But if I am asked whether Panama City is in Texas or in Florida, and I must look at a map, is that cheating?

BILL AGAIN

DEAR ABBY: This is in answer to your question, "Is it considered cheating to use a dictionary while working a crossword puzzle?" No, it is most assuredly NOT. How many educated people know the two-letter word for an Ugandan six-toed bitter vetch? When the puzzle requires such a word, and I have to look it up, I do not feel as though I am cheating. I figure that the author of the crossword puzzle is cheating. How about asking the geniuses who make up these puzzles for their opinions?

R. B. S.

DEAR ABBY: Working a crossword puzzle is a game. The puzzle versus me. If I can solve the puzzle on my own, I am the winner. When I find it necessary to consult a dictionary, I admit defeat. But I am still curious enough to try to find what word in order to complete the puzzle. The feeling of triumph, however, is absent.

ISABEL

DEAR ABBY: I would like to meet the person who can complete a crossword puzzle without using any tools, such as a dictionary or reference books. Crossword puzzles are comprised primarily of words that are never used in ordinary conversation, and never appear anywhere except in crossword puzzles.

Would YOU know what the six-letter word for the jackal god of the necropolis was? As a clue, he is usually represented as the son of OSIRIS, who shared with THOTH the office of conductor of the dead to the judgment hall in AMENI. The answer is ANUBIS. Why, how simple! I am sure you knew it all the time but it slipped your mind.

HUGH

DEAR ABBY: I fail to understand how one can "cheat" in a game where only he is playing. In working a crossword puzzle, the object is to complete it. If a puzzle is so simple that it can be completed without any research, I would consider it a waste of time. I use a large unabridged dictionary, a Bible, a World Atlas and a set of encyclopedia when I undertake to work a crossword puzzle, and I feel that I gain much by doing so. To do "research" increases one's knowledge, and is certainly not "cheating."

DEAR ABBY: If it is considered "cheating" to use a dictionary while working a crossword puzzle, then it is also cheating to use a slide rule in order to solve a mathematical problem.

Unique Experiment for Artists Scheduled for Mill Hall

MILL HALL, Pa. — A unique experiment to encourage bona-fide artists plagued by lack of instruction, privacy and funds will begin its first phase next week in the quiet central Pennsylvania town of Mill Hall nestled in the Appalachian Mountains. Open only to bona-fide artists, the Millbrook Plan, is designed to provide instruction, materials and bed and board at cost.

THE PLAN was developed by D. G. Reinhold, a leading Pennsylvania silversmith and gallery owner and Professor Kelly Yeaton of Pennsylvania State University.

Basically all creative arts will be taught by experts who are donating their talents.

SIX COURSES will be taught and fed at cost locally," Reinhold says.

THE SAME system will apply to artists who paint, write and sculpt. While 16 is the youngest age the Plan will accept, artists must demonstrate their ability before becoming eligible to participate. "This is not an art colony, per se," Reinhold commented. "What we hope to do is create an atmosphere where real artists have the opportunity to do their best work and not set up an 'arty escape' for people."

Professor Yeaton, co-founder of the plan, will lead a class in an exploration into the disciplines and ways of thought of many arts and crafts as a method of personal development. He will give a series of lectures, lead discussions and group work.

THE "COURSE" pre-supposes no previous talent or even interest in the arts and no experience is necessary. Neither are there age limits although mature adults and high school and college students are sought.

"The aim," Prof. Yeaton says, "is to draw from the arts as a source of creative stimulation and creative disciplines and to relate these concepts and skills to the demands of ordinary life."

The pottery course, the first phase, will specialize in stone-ware, and will be taught in the Professor Park, Park, one of the few Americans to study "Eastern Manner", according under Shoji Yamada of Japan, said the students would learn every phase of pottery from digging and mixing clays and glazes to design and the methods of forming. "The only limit to the student is in his imagination," Park says.

CLAY for the work will be dug by the students at Poe Padig, Pa., an Alpine pothole left from the glacier age. The clay has a special elasticity. Metallic oxides for glazes will be dug from the old mines around Scotia, Pa.

The students will mix their clay with their feet, the only practical way for large amounts, according to Park. The eight-week course will teach pottery making as practiced since it was first discovered man could fashion vessels from clay. Seven wheels will be available to the classes and the students will fire their kilns with wood.

The only tools required are two buttons and a piece of thread, a cork and a needle, according to Park. All work is done by hand.

Information on the Millbrook Plan is available by writing the Millbrook Art Gallery, Mill Hall.

Singing Boys' Concert at Chautauqua Is Scheduled for Next Tuesday Night

CHAUTAUQUA — Pennsylvania's Singing Boys, unique 32 voice boy choir described by the New York Herald Tribune as "a rare and refreshing musical phenomenon" will appear in the Chautauqua Amphitheater Tuesday night, July 7, at 8:30 p.m.

IT IS A repeat engagement for the group which last season provided one of the most popular programs of the season. The choir is directed by Byron L. Swanson who founded the organization in 1946 with ten youngsters. Today, nearly 100 boys, from age 6 to 15, take part in three choirs, the younger lads "in training" for the concert group.

The Chautauqua concert will be an innovation in one respect — it will be the first time in the history of the choir that a girl has taken part in the program. Mr. Swanson has chosen Sue Wrhen, Oberlin College student, to assist as soloist in the selections from the Broadway show "The King and I."

THE SINGING Boys program will include a group of religious songs, a group of French tunes, and Calypso Songs in costume. For the Calypso, the choir will be joined by a quartet of older boys, all of them alumnae of the organization.

The boys have been seen and heard on every major radio and television network and have toured extensively throughout eastern United States and Canada, singing for colleges and organized audience series. Their annual tours often cover 5,000 miles extending west to Chicago and south to Florida.

THE REVIEWS of the New York music critics followed their successful Town Hall concert. The Tribune critic called them "a superbly schooled group of young singers... almost incredible perfection of tonal balance."

The World Telegram wrote "one of the most charming moments in the season's music" and similar accolades were received from the New York Times and Musical America.

Night Golfing Plan Upsets Home Owners

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — Golfers' cursing has caused residents of homes overlooking the Salisbury Park course in nearby East Meadow to tee off against plans for night golf.

"It will extend the cursing hours," wrote 40 residents in a letter to Nassau County Executive Eugene H. Nickerson. They protested the planned installation of lights on the course.

The letter was written by Gerald Ball, who said Thursday that the "homes put up with the golfers and their choice language all day long, and we feel that comes evening, we are due a little tranquility."

J. R. Rohleder, supervisor of customer information for Bell Telephone Co. of Pennsylvania, will describe the various stages of the National Aeronautics and Space program for human exploration of the moon and the important part being played by the Bell System in history's most challenging peacetime project.

The talk will be illustrated by free-hand drawings in luminous colors under black lights.

Reservations for the 7 p.m. dinner should be made with Chief Douglas Ward.

Money for Nothing?

THERE IS a little theory kicking around among the leftist economic minds of this country which has some frightening implications. The idea goes by the initials GAI, which stands for Guaranteed Annual Income. The theory is that you get paid, whether you work or not.

For a society which has been founded on the principle of work as a moral as well as an economic force, this is not only astounding, but shocking. It means, in effect, that many people, should this plan to be adopted, would be paid a minimum wage either for not working, or for working as some occupation which they like and enjoy; some hobby or sideline.

Now we have come close to this principal with some big city and big state plans which interlock food, unemployment insurance and welfare payments. But we have never totally cast ourselves into the GAI plan.

It is being argued by these thinkers, many of them influenced by basic ideas of Karl Marx, that the machine age is bringing a crisis into society; a surplus of workers which cannot be absorbed by conventional means. For that reason, it becomes necessary to support the economy by handouts.

Now this is the welfare state, in toto. This is the Marxian principle of "to each as he needs." However, it still goes against the grain to think of supporting non-workers—a kinder phrase, perhaps, than "loafers"—in a moral atmosphere which still owes much to our Victorian grandparents. Indeed, psychologically speaking, it is recognized that the average man needs the stimulus of work to remain in good mental health. This was one of the dangers cited by those who are afraid of the impact of automation on industry and society.

To be sure, we have been developing a class of the idle poor over the past 30-40 years. Some of these families are now entering their third generation of idleness, the welfare free-loading being passed on from father to son pretty much as the family trade once was passed on. But this is not the normal case. Most families on relief can't help themselves, and ever since society began to organize, we have had bums and loafers. More than the poor, they are always with us.

We have come a long way since the mid-Victorian poor laws of England, which made poverty a crime on one hand, and encouraged it on the other. No one wants to return to those days, but even so, there is a limit in the other direction, too.

To accept the idea of the Guaranteed Annual Income, we must brainwash one or more whole generations. It will be an interesting process to watch—provided we are allowed to watch it, that is.

Does the Buck Stop?

HARRY S. TRUMAN used to have a sign on his desk that said, "The Buck Stops Here." Well, the business of buck-passing has been indulged in quite happily by the various state and federal agencies involved in the controversy over surplus food for the poor of Warren County—and, implicitly, the state. The Dept. of Property and Supplies blames the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture. The Agriculture Dept. says it doesn't care, it's the state agencies' fault, then someone suggests that the Welfare Dept. is to blame, and Welfare says no, it's the Dept. of Property and Supplies... and so on and so forth...

What is unfortunate is that these gentlemen are playing round games with the welfare of human beings. Bureaucracy ceases to be funny when stomachs are empty because of it. In a nation which has an overabundance of food, it is a crime that any man should want bread.

We cheer the County Commissioners for their stand. We are ashamed of the buck-passing going on among the agencies. Where does the buck stop, anyhow?

Goldwater Humor?

GOLDWATER JOKES are making the rounds. Latest one goes thus:

Asked if he'd win if nominated for the Presidency, Sen. Goldwater said, "Of course I will. I'll carry all 13 states."

No comment.

Editorial Viewpoints Of Other Leading Area Newspapers

It seems strange that U.S. senators, who insist that members of the Administration—any Administration—divest themselves of holdings in private enterprise to avoid conflicts of interest, are so reluctant to apply the same rules to themselves. However, since the Bobby Baker investigation several forthright members of the upper house have made public their financial situations on a voluntary basis and have called for rules requiring all fellow members to do likewise.

None of these attempts has gotten very far among the senators, many of whom seem very eager to charge "special interest" when they are looking into contract awards by federal agencies, notably the Defense Department. However, one enigmatic proposal calling for partial disclosure by senators of their financial assets, but NOT their income, has won the approval of the Senate Rules Committee.

This proposal, sponsored by Sen. B. Everett Jordan (D-N.C.), was approved after a much stronger measure was rejected. The Jordan resolution would require disclosure of the names of all corporations or private businesses in which a senator or Senate employee holds an interest which equals half of his annual Senate salary. However, the amount of his stock and other holdings would still remain undisclosed.

Whether this proposal will be acceptable to the full Senate is a moot question at the moment. One thing is certain and that is it WON'T be acceptable to the public which is pretty fed up with the Senate's "Don't do as I do, do as I say," attitude. Special privilege doesn't extend just to the White House doors under President Johnson or any other President.

One of the myths in the water pollution crisis now having such great impact on all parts of the U.S., including the Erie County area, is the story that streams or bodies of water purify themselves.

One of the least understood areas of pollution is this self-purification theme, for time and again we hear people claim that Lake Erie would quickly revert back to its former clean state in a few years if no contaminants were dumped into it.

The truth, as pointed out by the state's Sanitary Water Board and other scientists, is that water has only a limited ability to purify itself.

For example, the process of stream "purification" can cause another form of pollution. Nutrients in sewage feed aquatic growths which in turn choke streams and lakes, in turn cutting off supplies of oxygen, in turn affecting the fish life.

Scientists concerned with Lake Erie pollution have estimated that if no further pollutants were dumped into the water, it might take a half-century for the lake to cleanse itself, and maybe never.

The self-purification idea is a nice and easy one, but unfortunately it's strictly a myth.

The Power Hookup and LBJ

WASHINGTON — The Administration this week is suffering internal hemorrhages over the question of whether the private utilities shall dominate the first long-range hydroelectric power hook-up in the history of the United States, patterned after the thousand-mile interties of Sweden and the Soviet Union.

Gov. Pat Brown of California and most California Democratic Congressmen are opposed to letting Pacific Gas and Electric and private companies dominate this hookup—which they so long opposed.

Sincere Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall is for a proposed compromise between public power and the private utilities, but Rep. John Moss of Sacramento says, "Stewart has only a meager understanding of what it's all about."

President Johnson is on the sidelines, waiting for his boys to thresh things out.

This internal hassling is relatively mild, however, compared with the wire-pulling inside the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power before it was finally enmeshed into siding with PG & E, Southern California Edison, and San Diego Gas and Electric.

Los Angeles has the biggest municipal power operation in the United States. The professionals who run it are the best-paid civil servants in the nation, have become relatively affluent, want their daughters to come out in high society, like the moguls of the private utilities.

Chairman of the L. A. Department of Water and Power, however, is a tough little non-conformist, Nathan O. Friedman, born in Vermont, who speaks with a Yankee twang and went to a Methodist school in Vermont where, he says, "If I hadn't been so tough they'd have converted me."

The chairman, who calls himself "O-Friedman," says, "Those private power companies have been trying for years to run us. If we can get government power from Bonneville Dam in the Northwest, why should we put our necks in the private utility noose?"

To explore the feasibility of bringing unused government power from Bonneville dam in Oregon over a thousand miles down to Los Angeles, Friedman sent another commissioner, William Myers, to Scandinavia and Siberia. He came back with the report that long distance lines would work even though American utilities then claimed they wouldn't.

Following Myers' report, the Los Angeles Power Department adopted a resolution favoring this long distance hookup and proposed a contract with International Utilities to build the line from the Columbia River to Los Angeles. International Utilities under this contract would permit any other utility or government agency to use the line just as any car or truck can use a toll highway.

Two members of the Commission, Henry Bodkin and Cliff Marker, dissented. But the majority vote really alarmed PG & E. Its lobbyists went into action. All sorts of wires were pulled. Finally last October 4, just before the LA Power Department was scheduled to take a final vote, Chairman Friedman got a call from the office of Mayor Sam Yorty.

"The mayor thinks you're going a little fast," said Yorty's assistant, Joe Quinn. "What's wrong with a 30-day delay?"

The commissioners then postponed a decision until November 5.

Just before this date, Mayor Yorty huddled with the Power Commissioners, confided that their decision could be very embarrassing.

"I am in politics," he said. "I'd feel better if you'd get a consultant, such as someone from Cal Tech to OK this power hook-up."

"We've studied this backward and forward," replied Chairman Friedman, "but if you will feel better, we'll be glad to get an independent study."

The Commissioners then retained F. J. Lane Sr., a British engineer who had worked on long distance power lines in Sardinia, New Zealand, and New South Wales. Lane made his report, completely endorsed the long distance line from Bonneville Dam to Los Angeles.

He recommended that the line be built either at International Utilities expense or by the city. And since the City of Los Angeles had financial problems, and since LA gave the city the right to take over the line at any time, Lane recommended International Utilities.

The three man majority in the power department then ruled once again to proceed.

Whereupon Mayor Yorty telephoned each commissioner, accused them of working against his policies, demanded that they reverse themselves. Commissioner Frank Palmeri, an undertaker, caved in, switched his vote. This gave a 3-2 majority in favor of the private utilities. Two weeks later, February 24, the entire department surrendered to Yorty.

The mayor then proposed that the city build one of the long-distance direct current lines, but the money advanced by Southern California Edison; that PG & E build an alternating current line from California up to the Oregon border, with the Federal government building another long-distance direct current line from Southern California up to the Columbia River.

Secretary of the Interior Udall didn't like this. But after a lot of backstage haggling he has accepted a complicated compromise of private and public lines which Congressman Moss describes as a "pig in a poke and nobody knows what's in the poke."

Hearings on the plan are proceeding before the Senate Interior committee.

Keeping Cool in Summer

The bible says there is a time to be born and a time to die, a time to kill and a time to heal. There is also a time when commentators should remain cool-headed about the claims and counter-claims, the viewing-with-horror and the excessive pointing-with-pride, of the contending political factions.

At the moment there are terrifying predictions that the nomination of you-know-who will ruin the Republican Party. The dire fate of the Whigs is often mentioned. But this is sheer nomenclatural worship, not traditional worry. The fact is that two-party polarization (and even a four-party subdivision within the two-party system) is normal to American political life, and it hardly matters that the Whigs grew out of the Federalists, and the Republicans out of the "conscience Whigs." Just as there will always be an England, there will always be an opposition party in America.

A further observation to be made is that horrendous pre-convention bloodletting can be followed by party harmony as politicians whose first desire is to win elections manage to bury the most ugly-looking hatchets. It is already forgotten that the Democrats in 1960 staged the most tumultuous sort of Donnybrook before uniting under Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson. The wildest things were said in derogation of young John F. Kennedy before the convention vote count showed him winning over Johnson by a two-to-one margin. Eleanor Roosevelt insinuated that JFK had not dared vote for the condemnation of Joseph McCarthy. The Stevenson forces passed out copies of a syndicated column at the convention denouncing Kennedy. Senator Eugene McCarthy made a pointed speech nominating Stevenson. Ex-President Harry Truman said that Kennedy was too young to be President. And Lyndon was insultingly sarcastic about old Joe Kennedy's stand on the war in 1939 and 1940 and about son John's apologetic remarks on the downing of the U-2 spy plane over Russia.

A visitor from Timbuctoo or Allahabad, unused to the tribal ways of American politics, would have predicted that the Democrats could not possibly mend their rifts in time for November. But they did, beginning with the nomination of Lyndon Johnson for Vice President.

Whether the Republicans can come together after their San Francisco convention this year is, of course, another story. But don't bet that they won't patch up the old ship for what promises to be a long and possibly futile stern chase of Lyndon Johnson. If Goldwater gets the nomination, the liberal swing vote will desert to the Democrats.

If Scranton gets it, many conservatives will feel impelled to stay home on the ground that, if we must have a liberal President, Johnson will do as well as any. But Goldwater stands to pick up a counter swing vote away from the Democrats in Southern and border states. And Scranton, who has conservative instincts (as is proved by his stand against Pennsylvania labor on the unemployment compensation issue), could execute a swaying turn to the right in time for November.

The commentator bent on keeping cool about Goldwater claims must doubt that the current drive to wean Goldwater delegates away from him will get anywhere. The methods being used to create a blitz atmosphere for Scranton are too obviously threadbare. Pollsters have been recruited by New Hampshire, Oregon and California. The move to bring Tom Dewey in to exercise "muscle" on Goldwater delegates revives too many painful memories of 1952. The stories that private eyes have been hired to discover where Goldwater delegates are morally or financially vulnerable can be taken with a few grains of salt, for a good deal of effort has been spent by the Goldwaterites on picking men who are both clean and devoted. And the reiteration that Goldwater has been "impulsive" in his remarks about Cuba could boomerang. There are a lot of non-impulsive people in this country who would be glad to provoke a showdown with Castro.

Even if he gets nowhere in 1964, however, Scranton has put himself very much on the map for a future career. Pennsylvania law prevents him from running to succeed himself as governor, which means that he will be out of office before 1968. However, like Mt. Everest, he is "there" for future reference in case of a Republican defeat in November. And if the Republicans should, by some miracle, win behind Goldwater, he is available for cabinet rank duty.

Keeping Well . . .

MANY of our readers ask why potassium chloride is taken. We assume it is prescribed to counteract the effects of modern oral diuretics. These drugs are used to treat dropsy and obesity, and to lower high blood pressure. The oral diuretics (thiazides) encourage the kidneys to eliminate sodium chloride, a constituent of table salt. This substance holds water in the body tissues and the more sodium, the less elimination of water from the kidneys.

Hypertensives are helped by diuretics because sodium raises the blood pressure; and the excretion of sodium lowers tension. Victims of dropsy benefit in the same way because their waterlogged tissues dry out. The obese individual does not shed fat like dead skin; it is changed chemically into water and carbon dioxide. The latter is exhaled but water must escape thru the kidneys. This is where diuretics come in handy.

What does all this have to do with potassium? When diuretics force the elimination of sodium from the body an equal amount of potassium is lost. If treatment is carried on for a long time, the body's supply of potassium becomes so low (hypokalemia), serious symptoms develop unless the deficiency is made up. It is here that potassium chloride enters the picture.

The most striking symptom of hypokalemia is muscular weakness. Unless potassium is supplied it may progress to paralysis of the extremities. Changes in the electrocardiogram occur also.

Potassium tablets may be used for ather conditions where this elements is needed. Potassium is lost, for example, in severe vomiting or diarrhea, during diabetic acidosis, and when tumors invade the adrenal glands.

E. K. writes: What is meant by a functional sickness? REPLY—Fatigue, indigestion, pain, or palpitation may result from emotional reactions such as anger, frustration, fear, anxiety, or tension. These symptoms are referred to as functional because they have no organic basis. On the other hand, identical symptoms may originate from infection, ulcer, injury, or impaired circulation, which are organic in origin.

N. B. writes: Can dog fleas bite humans?

REPLY—Yes. Persons who are sensitive to these insects may develop an eruption on the skin, not necessarily limited to the site of the bite. Graded flea antigen has been fairly successful in relieving this condition.

B. C. writes: Is overweight a hazard in hernia surgery?

REPLY—Yes. Obesity increases the risk of surgery for technical reasons, overstretched tissues, and the possibility of cardiac complications associated with excess blubber.

J. R. writes: In regard to your article on false noses, where can my husband get one? He was in an accident.

REPLY—Consult a plastic surgeon, a make-up artist, or a salesman in a novelty shop.

J. S. writes: Whenever you write about Parkinsonism, you never mention whether it is contagious. I am very anxious to know.

REPLY—It is not, even tho the disorder is relatively common.

The Practical Joking Brothers

The day of the practical joker is gone. There was a time when it was considered to be excruciatingly funny to kidnap the bride. Or to get the bridegroom-to-be so drunk at a bachelor party that he awakened on a train bound for Nome. Or to go to an Irish wake and paint the faces of those who fell asleep, with burnt cork.

I knew a priest who presented monsignor with a bottle of whiskey as an anniversary gift, and the bottle was filled with filth. A jet captain once gave me his hotel room and forgot to tell me that it had been rented to a honeymoon couple. Mark Hellinger perpetrated so many practical jokes that some people started to tremble when he walked into a room smiling.

The last of the breed consists of Ed Lewis, the world's greatest magazine salesman, and the Brothers Fawcett. The Fawcetts are sons of the late William Fawcett, who drew up a Rabellaisian little sheet called Captain Billy's Whiz Bang. The boys — Roscoe, Buzz, Gordon and Roger — built the business into a magazine empire and a book company with the help of Bill Lengel.

Lewis and the Fawcetts have devised so many practical jokes that it is impossible to detect the apocryphal from the actual. One of them, I know, had a big house next to an estate where the owner liked to stand on a diving board and sing arias at dawn. It drove Fawcett nuts. And no hint could stop it.

One summer night, someone went out and bought five barrels of gelatine. After midnight, it was dumped into the singer's swimming pool. Then Fawcett sat up all night with binoculars, humming to himself. He could hardly wait for dawn. When the sunlight suffused the summer landscape, the man came out of his home in swim trunks, went to the pool, and stood on the diving board singing his aria at the top of his voice.

Fawcett watched, beaming. Then the man clasped his hands over his head, and leaped high in a swan dive. The gelatine was just hard enough. For a moment, it appeared that the diver would never come up.

Roscoe had a friend named Van Camp. He heard that Van was going to Chicago. "Don't get a room," Roscoe said. "Take mine." He handed Van a key for room 212. The recipient said: "Gee, thanks." Fawcett told him to think nothing of it, that he maintained the room all year round.

Van got to the room, took off his jacket, and found that Fawcett had left a little whiskey on the night table. He had a drink, kicked his shoes off, and made a few long distance calls. An hour later, a key turned in the door and a couple walked in. They asked Van what the hell he was doing in their room. He asked them what they were doing in Fawcett's room.

A row started. The house detective was called. No one had ever heard of Roscoe Fawcett. Van was thrown into the street, and his jacket after him. Seems that Fawcett had stopped at the hotel a couple of weeks before, and forgot to turn in the key.

Another time, a bachelor friend of the Fawcetts proposed marriage and was accepted by a girl who felt that all editors and writers are bohemian nuts. He arranged to have pre-dinner cocktails with her at his apartment. The Fawcetts heard about it.

They only had an hour in which to do something. Ed Lewis devised a few items. It was thought of getting a live pigeon and putting it in the apartment. Roger recalled that their bachelor friend was mad about clamshell ashtrays. So he took a dozen of them and placed them inside the apartment door. Under the rug.

Buzz rigged up the old standby of practical jokers: placing a bucket of water over the door on the inside, and tying it to the door knob. Gordon was utilized in repainting the living room in wavy stripes. This requires paint and a fast hand. The ceiling was redone in black and white tic-tac-toe games.

Someone noticed that the bachelor had a lot of clothes in his closet. These were bundled together and sent to the cleaners en masse. The tickets were flushed down the bathroom drain. A few phony letters from spurious ladies were penned and left on a conspicuous desk. They reminded the bachelor of events which no one would want to remember.

They were still at work wrecking their friend's life when there was a knock on the door. It was the police. They were dragged off to the police station protesting that it was all just a good clean joke on an old pal.

It wasn't until they were in the precinct that they noticed something strange. Roscoe was missing...

How To Pick A President

WASHINGTON — The Democrats have a problem. How are they going to make their convention in Atlantic City next August interesting enough to attract a large television audience? Since this is supposed to be a horse race with only one horse, the best minds in the Democratic party have been racing their brains for some interesting ideas.

Perhaps we can be of some help.

Although there may be some objections, we believe the Democrats could attract a very high rating if they got an interesting keynote speaker. There is probably no one in the country that Americans would rather hear from than former Senate Majority Secretary Bobby Baker. Mr. Baker, if he agreed to speak, would be able to deliver a fascinating discourse on many political subjects that heretofore have never been discussed. It is the tragedy of this country that we are always exposed to a business man turned politician, but rarely to a politician turned business man.

With Bobby Baker as the keynote speaker the Democratic Convention would get off to a good start. Now how do we hold the audience?

Since Atlantic City is known for its Bathing Beauty Pageant we feel it wouldn't be a bad idea if all the Democratic Vice Presidential candidates competed in such a contest.

To do this properly each candidate would be asked to walk down the runway at Convention Hall in a tuxedo bathing suit and the delegates could decide who the President's running-mate should be.

The Vice Presidential candidates would not be judged on looks alone. They would also have to show, just as the Miss America contestants, that they have talent, personality and poise. Each candidate would have to read a speech or a poem or do an imitation of Everett Dirksen or Charlie Halleck.

They would each then have to show their ability on the dance floor and finally, to prove they had poise, every contestant would be asked to lift up a beagle by his ears without letting the dog yelp.

The winner would not only be given the Vice Presidential nomination but he would also receive a scholarship which would keep him out of the country for the next four years. The runners-up would be given free cabinet posts or ambassadorships.

A contest of this type would add a lot of suspense to the convention and would certainly hold the TV audiences for at least three days.

Lodge, LBJ And Viet Nam

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson couldn't have it better if he had cooked it up. Republicans are boxing themselves in, which is fine for Johnson who has to run against one of them, since nothing slows a runner like the inside of a box.

They have to climb over Viet Nam, civil rights, words that can hardly be withdrawn or explained away, and a highly unpleasant intraparty struggle.

Even Republicans on the same side don't agree on what the issues are.

For 10 months Henry Cabot Lodge, as U. S. ambassador, was the Kennedy-Johnson administration's chief agent in fighting communism in Viet Nam. He quit to come home and help Pennsylvania's Gov. William Scranton try to beat Sen. Barry Goldwater for the Republican presidential nomination.

If anybody is an authority on what's happening in Southeast Asia it should be Lodge. He said the war against communism there is on the right track. And he said more: he doesn't see how Viet Nam could become a campaign issue.

But Scranton, the man he came home to help, says it. So does Goldwater. And this week so did a group of House Republicans.

They criticized the Johnson administration, even though Lodge was serving it, and said its policy in Viet Nam was "why win?"

If the Republicans do make it an issue, they put Lodge in the middle.

Johnson can throw Lodge's words back at them, since as ambassador he was part and parcel of the administration's policy and approved it.

There had been speculation that if Scranton lost to Goldwater he might run for the vice presidency.

It was reasoned that in this way the two wings of the party might be kept from flying apart.

For a while it looked possible. No matter how much he criticized Goldwater, Scranton said he would support the Arizonian if he got the nomination.

This seems out the window now for Scranton has reached the point of saying Goldwater is unfit for the presidency. How, now, could he urge Goldwater's election?

Meanwhile, Goldwater, by his vote against the civil rights bill, has created a problem for Northern and Eastern Republicans with large Negro voting populations in their states and districts.

The senator has said a Republican couldn't win this year without the South. And no doubt his vote won him friends among Southern Whites.

But if he should try to appease Northern Negroes, or help Northern Republican politicians, by saying if elected he would enforce the civil rights act, then he could lose what he gained among Southern whites without persuading Northern Negroes. There's no indication he has anything like this in mind.

Upon his return Monday Lodge hinted he would try to get Dwight D. Eisenhower to come out for Scranton before the Republican convention opens July 13.

Monday he talked to the former president and later said he expected him to speak out on the nomination before July 13.

Goldwater has a carload of convention delegates in his pocket. He worked for them the hard way and looks like a man with a stranglehold on the nomination.

He owes nothing to such big Eastern Republicans as Scranton, Lodge, and New York's Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, since all of them opposed him.

If now Eisenhower joins them but Goldwater wins anyway, he'll owe even less. Almost certainly then the conservatives would control the party.

This might split the Republicans, although Goldwater would need all the Republican help around.

Johnson must be enjoying the show. News out of the White House says he won't be traveling much in July, the Republican convention month.

Does anyone in the crowd remember Florence Foster Jenkins, the incredible amateur soprano who used to give concerts that were so far out they became almost a status symbol with the hip group? Well, whether or not the world is ready for another one, it's getting one.

Remember if you will the name Bertha Halozan, described as a physiotherapist. So far she has confined her performances to private parties, but she's preparing to launch her career in a big way—records, a Greenwich Village night club engagement, and a Carnegie Hall concert.

Tippi Hedren may slug the ballyhoo boys for Alfred Hitchcock's "Marnie." They're giving out the news that Sean Connery's wardrobe for the flicker cost more than hers, and that's enough to cause storm warning in any Hollywood studio...

Keeping Well . . .

MANY of our readers ask why potassium chloride is taken. We assume it is prescribed to counteract the effects of modern oral diuretics. These drugs are used to treat dropsy and obesity, and to lower high blood pressure. The oral diuretics (thiazides) encourage the kidneys to eliminate sodium chloride, a constituent of table salt. This substance holds water in the body tissues and the more sodium, the less elimination of water from the kidneys.

1776 'till NOW...

Independence Day, the Fourth, the Glorious Fourth of July, that Great Day in the history of our Great Country—the birthday of our freedom! It's time to celebrate! It's time to rededicate yourself to God and Country!

In 1776, July 4 was a day of jubilee, bell ringing. A people rejoiced with all its heart because its Declaration of Independence had been adopted. Long had they struggled under the oppression of tyranny, awaiting the birth of time that would bring leaders to guide their way to freedom. They had been plucky, they had been patient, but now their hour had struck. At last their claims to "certain unalienable Rights... Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness"... were no longer intangible dreams, but a living challenge across the sea "to a candid world." These patriots knew the struggle would be hard, that it would mean personal sacrifice for each and every one... it was a precarious assignment; it was a fearful task. Did they hang back and haggle as to the presence of such daring? Did they talk of doubt and fear and mistrust of their leaders? They weren't made of such stuff. They were proud of their commitment. Like their leaders, they were ready, "with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence," to pledge their Lives, their Fortunes, and their sacred Honor to support their Declaration of Independence. Their Spirit sanctioned every word. Their bells rang out in a grand "AMEN!"

This year July 4 they will be gayer than ever. We will picnic, we will swim, we will go places. There'll be fireworks parades, band playing, speech-making. Again it will be a great day of celebration. But there'll be an undercurrent of solemnity; there'll be a reverent re-dedication to our country. We know that our nation stands today in grave peril; we are warned at every hand of the powerful tyranny which rides today unchecked, growing more threatening and more powerful hour by hour, day by day... Russia and her fifth column. We realize that the fate of our freedom is in our own hands. We must not be unconcerned. We must recognize the dangers. We must be ready to sacrifice. Like our forefathers, we must value our democratic freedom more than life itself... As we have done for nearly 200 years. Never have the people of America failed to rally in support of the principles set forth in our Declaration of Independence. We never will! Communism cannot take root in the Land of the Free. We have no desire for territory. We have no ambition for conquest and military glory. We want no loot. But we mean to have our freedom and independence, whatever the cost. In 1776, our forefathers made a bold Declaration against Despotism. Today, we stand ready to uphold that Declaration against any powers that be. The Spirit of '76 still lives. The right to freedom of worship must Prevail.

CORE Sees Rights Bill 'No Cureall'

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The civil rights bill, signed on the opening day of the 22nd annual convention of the Congress of Racial Equality, "is no magic carpet that's going to take us to the promised land," the 700 CORE delegates were told by their national director, James Farmer.

"We have a responsibility now to test this bill in every place of public accommodation, North and South," he said in a keynote address Thursday night. "Voluntary integration has not worked in this country, and this state and every state must be prepared to enforce its laws if that voluntary integration is not forthcoming."

Farmer and CORE national chairman, Floyd B. McKissick, called on the delegates, representing 114 chapters with 75,000 members, to work out a broad program of quick tests of the new bill in employment, housing and education.

An impromptu test came within minutes of its signing, less than a block away from the convention auditorium and shortly before it convened.

One of the CORE delegates, Gene Young, 13, from Jackson, Miss., walked into the convention headquarters hotel barbershop and was refused a haircut.

A score of polite but persistent CORE demonstrators almost immediately converged on the basement shop and staged a sit-in until McKissick emerged to announce: "The hotel management is seeking to have the barbers union get every barber who will cut everybody's hair down here tomorrow."

"The next thing that we are going to do is to be down here tomorrow morning just to be sure," McKissick said.

4-H Dairy Projects Here Expanded, Pershke Reports

Dairy projects in 4-H Club work have expanded in subject matter and depth, adding to the knowledge and experience of members, according to Norman L. Pershke, Associate County Agent.

PERSHKE stated that there are two major dairy programs, dairy animal and dairy foods. Both, he said, have well defined objectives and offer incentive awards.

The dairy foods program opens up the important area of nutrition and club members learn about the main nutrients of milk necessary to health and growth. They also learn to make and serve tasty dishes and drinks from dairy products.

GREATER emphasis is being placed on nutrition science. A new handbook for club leaders and members just published is titled "Exploring Dairy Food Science for Education and Service."

Raising one or more dairy animals entails more than feeding and milking. "High milk production doesn't just happen," observes an extension dairy specialist. "There is no substitute for intelligent use of records and research findings."

THE YOUNG dairy lads and lassies soon learn the importance of animal health, good sanitation, herd improvement, marketing, showmanship and the business side of dairy farming, he said.

A 4-H dairy project often sparks future careers for young men and women in the multi-million dollar dairy industry, according to reports of former members. The extension service plays a big part in helping the 4-H'er toward his goal, just as it does the farmer in showing him how and why latest scientific practices can benefit agriculture.

Further information on dairy food and dairy animal programs can be obtained from the county extension agent in the Warren County Court House.

CLA Seeks $40,000 For Cleanup

JAMESTOWN, N.Y.—A drive to raise $40,000 for lake cleanup work will be set in motion Monday by about 200 volunteer workers for the Chautauqua Lake Association.

Major problems confronting the lake community are pollution, weeds and insects, according to W. George Weaver of Chautauqua, membership chairman.

"All of these problems can be coped with if we have the money," Mr. Weaver said. He added that public cooperation with cleanup efforts has to include, besides money, obedience of the sanitation and litter laws and respect for the rights of others.

The Lake Association completed its chemical weed control program last Saturday and will put its weed harvester into service Monday. The cutter will operate all summer.

A fogger has been purchased as a safeguard against lake fly depredations and a crew has been mustered to remove snags from the lake and outlet, using the association's weed spray barge.

Moravec was arrested for failing to stop for a stop sign. Damage to both cars involved was estimated to total $1,000.

Eva Adams said Thursdays — but she is determined to torpedo hoarders' hopes for a profit.

Miss Adams told a House Government Operations subcommittee she intends to convince those who hold the halves and other current coins in hopes of profit "that the market will be saturated, and that hoarding is ridiculous because there soon will be no shortage."

One of the best ways, she said, would be to continue the 1964 date on coins beyond this year. She said she believes that a 1792 law requiring annual dates "must be suspended temporarily."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Constitutional Rights subcommittee is inquiring into complaints about the screening of federal job applicants.

Chairman Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., said Thursday that complaints have been received that college students seeking jobs in security posts "are solicited to reveal the most intimate aspects of their personal lives and are asked to evaluate the adequacy of their own parents."

Police Clarify Crash Report

Confusion as to charges made in a two-car collision which occurred at 6:10 p.m. Wednesday in Pine Grove Twp. was clarified today by State Police of the Warren sub-station.

Police stated that a car operated by Paul Moravec, 1457 Yankee Bush Road, traveling west on Route 957, failed to stop for a stop sign and struck a vehicle driven by John Mcarry, 1203 Pennsylvania Ave. E., traveling south on Route 62.

Moravec was arrested for failing to stop for a stop sign. Damage to both cars involved was estimated to total $1,000.

Expect 500 Will Die On Roads

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Millions of Americans took to the highways today, bent on a leisurely observance of the long Independence Day weekend away from home.

The weather was not ideal for highway travel in about one-half of the country because there was a threat of scattered showers.

The National Safety Council estimated that more than 83 million motor vehicles will travel 8.4 billion miles during the three-day observance of the holiday. This is 300 million miles over the total travel during a nonholiday period of the same length.

Between 450 and 550 persons may lose their lives in traffic accidents during the period that started at 6 p.m. local time and will end at midnight Sunday, the council estimated.

The Associated Press made a survey during a recent three-day nonholiday period to establish a basis for comparison with the present holiday. There were 420 traffic deaths during the nonholiday weekend, 16 in boating mishaps and 104 by drowning.

Reaction to Rights Law Is Mixed Across Country

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Luther King Jr., head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference indicated their groups will speed tests of compliance and go to court if necessary.

Wilkins called the law the "Magna Carta of human rights."

King said Thursday was "a great day for America and a great day for democracy."

Gov. George Wallace of Alabama said: "I believe the legislation is unconstitutional and if unchallenged will result in the destruction of individual liberty and freedom in this nation."

He made the declaration in a telegram to Secretary of Commerce Luther H. Hodges in declining an invitation by Hodges to participate in conferences on putting the law into effect.

AFL-CIO President George Meany said signing of the law "represents a challenge to American society — a challenge that calls for the full realization in fact of the rights now established by law. The trade union movement, like every other segment of American life, must do its part in meeting that."

Birmingham, Ala., said, "Nobody will bother the Negroes as long as they seek remedies available to them under the NEW LAW."

Mayor Ivan Allen Jr. of Atlanta said that for the last 100 years the Negro has had to learn to be a courteous and polite loser, and "now the Negro has the responsibility to be a courteous, gracious and law-abiding winner."

that Mississippi operators of public accommodations should defer the law so its constitutionality can be tested.

Asked at a news conference whether he thought restaurant and hotel owners and the like should comply with the new law, the governor said: "I don't think they should. I think it should be tested in the courts. A great many people feel it is unconstitutional."

In other parts of the South, however, businessmen and community leaders expressed a willingness to go along with the new law, even if they don't like it.

The President announced he is nominating Leroy Collins, former governor of Florida, to direct the community relations service established by the law and that he is appointing an advisory committee to assist him. Collins is stepping out as president of the National Association of Broadcasters to take the post.

Weatherman Sees Fine Day For July 4 Events Here

In the Times Square area, float judges will be at Water St. on the reviewing stand. When the birthday car reaches this point, Miss Warren County will present a bouquet of flowers to Mrs. Minnie Mumford of Tidioute, who was born on the Fourth of July.

The parade will move east along Pennsylvania Ave., with all units entering from Laurel St. except Division 1 and 2 which will enter from Union St.

At Conewango Ave. the parade will turn toward Beatty Field. "No parking" is the order of the day along the parade route and on the south side of Fourth Ave. in the formation area from Union St. to Liberty St.

First aid stations will be manned by personnel from Warren Rescue Inc. at the intersections of Hickory and Market Sts. and Conewango Ave., with Pennsylvania Ave. and at the end of the parade route.

Chicken Bar-B-Que will be served at Beatty Field from noon until darkness falls or the chicken runs out. Tables and chairs will be set up for diners' comfort and take-home packages will also be provided.

The bell-ringing ceremony will be held at Beatty Field shortly after the parade disbands there. Church bells will herald the event by pealing at 1:45 p.m. The Freedom Bells will ring at 2 p.m. by Presidential proclamation.

Two Connecticut students of Americana, writers Eric Sloane and Eric Hatch, conceived the idea to revive the old custom of celebrating the Fourth of July with the ringing of bells. Their proposal first appeared in This Week Magazine, a national Sunday supplement, in February 1963.

The Warren Jaycees seized upon the idea and found a bell manufacturer who could produce the hand bell in quantities that would make it economical to buy. They encouraged groups throughout the country to join Warren in letting "Freedom Ring" throughout the land.

Local officials were proclaiming the event. Sen. Abraham Ribicoff introduced a resolution in Congress to make the event an official part of the nation's celebration. President Kennedy signed a proclamation to that effect last year; this year it was signed by President Johnson.

A new event this year will be wrestling at Memorial Field, scheduled to begin at 2:15, featuring a six-man tag team. The wrestlers are all professionals from the Pittsburgh area who have requested a "no holds barred" match.

At 6:30 the Spectacle of Music, sponsored by the Cornplanter Drum and Bugle Corps in conjunction with the Jaycee celebration, will be staged at Memorial Field. The competition this year will be an international one, featuring championship corps from Canada and the United States.

The four competing corps are the Marion Cadets of Marion, Ohio, who were Ohio American Legion Champions in 1961, 1962 and 1963 and also Ohio VFW Champions in 1962 and 1963; the Conquerors of Hamilton, Ont., who placed third in the Canadian national championships in 1963; St. Joseph's Cadets of Batavia, N.Y., who were New York State American Legion Champions in 1963, NYS VFW Champions in 1963 and New York-Canadian Association Champions in 1963; and the De LaSalle Corpsemen of Ontario, one of the top Canadian corps.

Exhibitions will be staged by the Cornplanters and the Meridian Woodpeckers, an all girl fifi and drum corps.

The festivities will draw to a conclusion with fireworks and awarding of the grand prize.

Chuck Stull, fireworks chairman, reports that the fireworks this year will consist of approximately 70 per cent aerial displays and 30 per cent ground displays, including a likeness of George Washington and a welcome display among others. The show will begin at 10 p.m. and be put on by the Rozzi Fireworks Co. of New Castle.

The Grand Prize—actually two prizes this year, a 1964 Chevrolet Impala four-door sedan and a trip for two to the World's Fair—will be awarded at 11 p.m. following the fireworks display.

The World's Fair trip includes transportation, lodging and admission to the Fair.

An essay contest being sponsored by the Jaycees in conjunction with the celebration will end at 8 a.m. tomorrow. Entries may be turned in at the Hootenanny tonight or given to a Jaycee member prior to 8 a.m. tomorrow at the Blue Manor.

Judges for the contest are Mrs. Howard Anderson and Mrs. William Keys, Warren teachers. The essay is to be a 500-word paper on "What Freedom Means to Me." Junior high and high school students are eligible to enter. The prize is a $25 savings bond.

COLUMBUS—In an effort to provide adequate zoning for this township, the Columbus Board of Supervisors will meet this Monday in the Township Building on North St. at 8:30 p.m.

Without the proper zoning in the township, the State reportedly refuses to continue work for the proposed Columbus Dam, which, if completed, will create a recreational lake. This potential recreation area is of considerable importance to Warrenites because it would provide them with a new water recreation spot.

Since the outcome of zoning in Columbus is so important to Warren County Commissioners D. H. Lay and Lewis Crippen, accompanied by Warren County Planning Commission Director Robert Skinner, will represent local interests at the meeting.

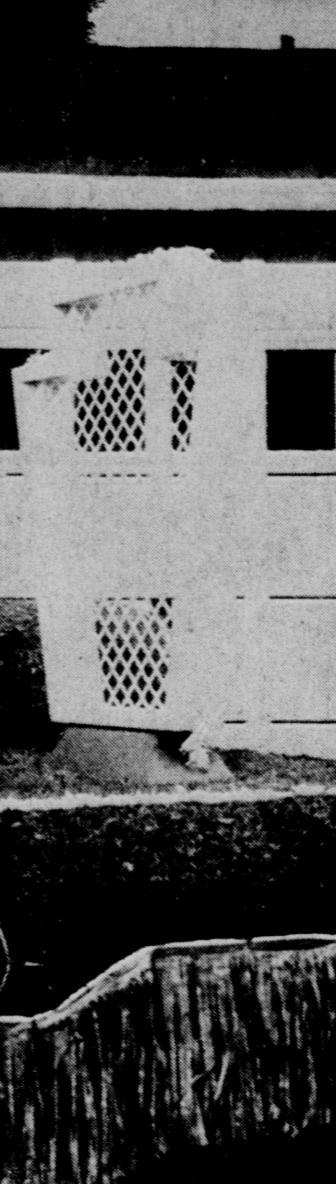

Although funds have already been appropriated for the proposed dam on Brockenstraw Creek, the construction will remain at a standstill, unless the Board of Supervisors initiates some action on zoning at the Monday meeting.

Attendance Isn't Everything

LOS ANGELES — It is interesting to note that the two biggest drawing cards in the major leagues these days have been playing the same kind of baseball.

The Mets will probably attract close to 2,000,000 in New York this year and Dodger attendance in Los Angeles could go as high as 2,500,000, which shows that everyone likes to laugh.

In the O'Malley Pavilion at the World's Fair, visitors will be entertained by dogs playing the banjo — symbolic of the product up to now this season.

Indisputably, the Dodgers have been a dog team, battling like something just recently removed from Central Park. The undrooping, determined quality that characterized this group has vanished. It doesn't hit in the clutch, it folds timidly once it falls behind and it is even remiss in the field.

One watching this is scarcely able to believe that the team before him won the National League pennant by six games last year and dispatched the Yankees four straight in the World Series.

It has been sheltered by its general manager, who has told critics repeatedly that he doesn't wish to put the knock on the boys because they are enduring pain privately as it is.

If they are, they deserve it. In spades. They are the principals in America's greatest farce which began with the sale of more than $4 million worth of tickets before the season even began.

People resorted to stealth and cunning to buy Dodger seats. To get a good season box, you had to wait for someone to drop dead.

Dodgers' Reward Is Poor

It was the greatest advance sale in the history of baseball, and the absurd rush has continued to where the club, at comparable stages, is running comfortably ahead of the figures of last year when the Dodgers drew something like 2,538,000.

Apart from physical attendance at the stadium, the community had pretty well lost its balance over the team. Merchants participated with greater vigor than ever and the transistor radio following grew to its highest elevation.

The Dodgers' reward to all has been baseball well under the .500 figure, and languid baseball, besides.

Debarking in San Francisco for a series which television brought to Los Angeles, the Dodgers opened with runners on first and third nobody out.

When Sandy Koufax is pitching, as he was in this game, about all he requires is a headstart of a run or two. The Dodgers fell on their helmets. They finally scored one in the seventh.

Koufax shut out the Giants until the eighth, gave up the tying run and left after the ninth with 10 strikeouts. Having already scored once, the Dodgers weren't ready again for 24 hours. They blew the game in the 13th, 2-1.

The second game was even more frustrating. Leading 3-1, then tied 3-3, the Dodgers flicked it away in the eighth with two infield errors.

Angels Take Advantage

By the fifth inning of the third game, the Giants were out there sailing by 9-1, which, of course, reduced things quickly to the level of ludicrousness. When a team that can't overcome a one-run lead is down by eight, the viewer automatically occupies himself with other things, such as sitting on the curbstone.

In one game with the Giants, the Dodgers had the bases loaded in the ninth and nobody out. They lost, 1-0. It made you ill.

As interesting today as a peanut butter sandwich, the Dodgers find their troubles compounded by the unaccountable splurge of their tenants, the Los Angeles Angels, who seized the opportunity to run up a winning streak of 11 straight.

In timing this charge to the grotesque showing of the Dodgers in San Francisco, the Angels made no serious advance on the American League, but they did a satisfactory job of diverting local attention from their landlord.

In a flash, the town became conscious of the Angels, and suddenly you envisioned what could happen here if the Dodgers were to regress and the other guys were to become a contender.

Obviously, the Angel ownership doesn't agree, but, in truth, it needs Anaheim like a hole in Autry's pocket.

All it needs is a respectable team and the cooperation the Dodgers are now giving it.

Certainly, the citizenry won't tolerate the kind of baseball the Dodgers have been dispensing. Comparing them, in fact, to peanut butter sandwiches is giving peanut butter the worst of it.

Rumors on Braves' Move Fly Again

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Another report is making the rounds that the Milwaukee Braves will shift to Atlanta for the 1965 season, and club President John McHale has refused to say unconditionally that the National League team will remain in Milwaukee next year.

McHale did repeat that "we're going to stay in Milwaukee as long as we are welcome."

"To keep resurrecting this rumor is ridiculous," McHale continued Thursday night. "I do not think we have to continue answering the same questions and have people draw possibly wrong conclusions."

However, when asked for a flat yes or no answer on whether

Fifth Straight Defeat for Pirates

Lose to Giants; Colts Next

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — The fourth of July isn't until Saturday but the Pittsburgh Pirates probably feel like they've had their share of fireworks on the West Coast.

A 6-5 loss Thursday to the San Francisco Giants saddled the Bucs with their fifth straight loss, their longest losing streak of the season.

The last three losses came from California teams, Los Angeles accounting for the first and the Giants with last two.

One bright spot for Pirate fans in the current road trip is the hitting of All-Star rightfielder Roberto Clemente.

Clemente, hitting a league leading .349, a single in three trips to the plate also scored twice Thursday.

Only two points behind is San Francisco's Willie Mays who had to leave because of an upset stomach after walking and scoring a run in the first inning.

A five-run sixth inning led to Pittsburgh's downfall and provided the league-leading Giants with their 12th victory in their last 14 games.

Orlando Cepeda's two-run homer, his 14th, off starter and loser Steve Blass (3-5) triggered the big inning. Four singles, a walk and a wild pitch accounted for the other three runs in the inning.

Big gun for the Pirates was Donn Clendenon who had four hits for a perfect day at the plate. The big first baseman also drove in two runs and scored twice.

He doubled in the eighth for one run and scored later on Willie Stargell's sacrifice fly, making the score 6-5.

Clendenon singled in his first run in the fourth to tie the score at 1-1. The Bucs took the lead, 2-1, in the sixth when Stargell singled with two on. Pittsburgh's Gene Alley hit a solo homer in the seventh.

Pittsburgh takes on Houston tonight with Pirate Vernon Law (6-6) and Bob Bruce (8-4) getting the starting nods.

Spahn Fails to Finish 9th Time

By MIKE RATHET

Associated Press Sports Writer

Where has Warren's Wonder gone?

For the ninth consecutive time Warren (The Wonder) Spahn, Milwaukee's 43-year-old pitching marvel, trudged from the mound Thursday after failing to finish what he started as the Braves lost to St. Louis 4-3.

So, within hours, Milwaukee fans were forced to wonder whether the Braves were ready to hit the road and whether Spahn had reached the end of it.

First came still another report that the Braves would be playing in Atlanta next year. And then Spahn went out to the mound against the Cardinals, looking for his first victory in a month and his first complete game since May 19.

Instead, the winningest left-hander in major league history was knocked out in the seventh inning and tagged with his third straight loss. He is bogged down with a 5-8 record and a staggering 4.89 earned run average.

But what was most indicative of Spahn's problems was his continuing failure to register a complete game. The 13-time, 20-game winner, whose career record stands at 355 victories and 224 losses, holds a major league record for complete games, having led the National League in that department nine times.

While Spahn's ineffectiveness continued to plague the Braves, the first-place San Francisco Giants suffered a temporary setback when Willie Mays was sidelined in the first inning against Pittsburgh because of an upset stomach.

With Willie absent, Orlando Cepeda took command, slugged a two-run homer and launched a five-run sixth inning rally that beat the Pirates 6-5. The victory kept the Giants 1½ games in front of the Philadelphia Phillies, who edged the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2.

Elsewhere, Cincinnati defeated the Chicago Cubs 7-0 behind Jim Maloney's four-hit pitching and Houston made the most of five New York errors for a 7-1 victory over the Mets.

Spahn, backed by homers by Rico Carty and Gene Oliver, led 3-2 going into the seventh. But Julian Javier, who earlier homered, got the Cardinals started with a single.

Pinch hitter Charlie James then smacked a double that scored Javier with the tying run and when pinch-swinger Carl Warwick followed with a single, Spahn got the hook. Lou Brock's sacrifice fly brought in the winning run.

The Phillies collected only five hits but made the most of them, scoring all their runs in the third against Phil Ortega.

Times-Mirror Outdoor Writer

Fishermen: Get Involved!

On June 9, Oil Creek from a point below Titusville to Oil City was hit by a pollution which killed hundreds of fish — trout, bass, walleye, northern pike and many of the rough species. The poisoning was particularly heavy in suckers. This was the fifth serious kill of fish in northwestern Pennsylvania in five weeks. Two occurred previously on French Creek and two in Erie's bay. Commenting on the events of that day and developments since, George E. Harper of Rouseville writes indignantly:

"On June 10, the News-Herald printed an article about 'The Fish Kill in Oil Creek.' Since that time there has been no word of what caused it or who caused it.

"I believe that we fishermen who pay our license fee of $5 and enjoy the sport of fishing are entitled to know what caused this unnecessary kill, and who is going to pay for restocking this stream."

"Oil Creek was getting to be one of our best fly-fishing spots in this section of Venango County and now 10 years of stocking and anti-pollution work has gone for nothing because of the carelessness of some persons, company or city. Why have we not learned what caused this pollution? Who is going to pay for restocking? Is our license going to be raised again to pay for someone else's error?"

"These questions and many others are being asked of every fisherman in this section. Let's have some answers."

The Case Is Not Closed

And contents noted:

As this is being written three weeks after the pollution, neither the Pennsylvania Fish Commission nor the State Department of Health at Meadville has a solid clue. And this state of affairs does not result from a lack of interest in or a pursuit of facts in the case. The fish commission and agents of the department of health spent three days investigating the poisoning immediately after the fish warden got his notice that fish were dying in Oil Creek.

At first, the investigators thought they might have a solid lead when their sample showed traces of ammonia. But these traces proved to be inconsequential. However, because the investigators "found nothing to go on," as one fish official told this writer last week, fishermen of Venango County should not feel the matter is closed. According to information given us, the department of health is to make an intensive inquiry near Titusville to see who might have been using what acid, caustic, or spray on or about June 9. The dead fish were found from a point one mile below Drake Well Park to Oil City. This is an indication that the pollution began just below Titusville. It could have come from Titusville, from Pine Creek or from any run near Drake Well Park.

In the event that the pollutant is identified, and the fish commission and department of health can pinpoint the party which caused it either accidentally or knowingly, the polluter will be prosecuted. If proven guilty, he will pay an amount equal to what would be needed to replace the dead fish if they were to be bought from a commercial fish supplier. The fish commission at the moment has a good count on how many fish died in Oil Creek, although the kill, fortunately was not as great as first reported.

Where Are the Protests

There are these other points attending the pollution. While the search goes on sportsmen should ask themselves to what extent they are guilty when poisoners escape. It is a fact that several fishermen were in Oil Creek as the fish struggled in the pollutant on the afternoon of June 9. Yet no one grabbed a container for a water sample. A quart of water for the fish warden could have been invaluable evidence.

We fishermen impatiently point fingers at state agencies when pollutions occur and blame these men for not caring enough. We are not fair. They are conscientious, and responsible. If industry, businesses or individuals who use strong chemicals in their processes and services were equally conscious of their responsibilities to the general public, pollution cases would soon be solved. Someone near Titusville at this moment knows what happened. His deed might have been an accident. But . . . why doesn't he own up?

The letter writer mentions that every fisherman in this section is asking questions. The trouble is they are not asking the questions in the right places. A watch of newspapers in this area shows that only Mr. Harper of Rouseville has taken time to write his editor asking for an accounting. Where are these hundreds of other fishermen who certainly must have enjoyed Oil Creek's fishing? Until they begin to flood newspapers and state officers and legislators with letters of protest, the polluters will continue to release their poisons into clean streams because "nobody cares." Fishermen must get involved when pollution occurs.

Two Australians In Tennis Finals

By GEOFFREY MILLER
Associated Press Writer
WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Maria Bueno, Brazil's tempestuous tennis star, is within sight of triumph after a three-year struggle to defeat illness and climb back to the top.

She plays Margaret Smith of Australia, the defending champion, in the women's final of the Wimbledon tournament Saturday. That was the title the 24-year-old South American girl won two years straight before she was stricken by jaundice in 1961.

Miss Bueno, displaying the strokes that once made her the world's top woman star, defeated Lesley Turner of Australia 6-4, 6-4 in the semifinals Thursday.

Two Aussies—Roy Emerson and Fred Stolle—faced each other in the men's final today.

Fight Results

SHIZUOKA, Japan — Yasuobu Takada, 130½, Japan, outpointed Oscar Reyes, 130½, the Philippines, 10.

COPENHAGEN — Laszlo Papp, 158, Hungary, knocked out Chris Christensen, 152, Denmark, 4.

Blackmer Man to Beat in Firecracker 50

By DAVE FAY
Times-Mirror Sports Editor

Ronnie Blackmer of Youngsville is less than 25 years old. According to the way insurance companies operate nowadays, this puts him in the category known as high risk, "any male under 25 years of age," or something along that line when he goes for auto insurance.

Due to the fact that Ronnie is married and a father holding a steady job, insurance companies would normally lower the risk a little, and also the amount which is to be paid each month.

But in Ronnie's case, the premiums aren't lowered, they're raised.

Every Saturday and Sunday night, Blackmer climbs into one of two small, light green cars and takes a little spin. The insurance companies call it stock car racing and as a result Ronnie's premiums skyrocket.

However, Ronnie has made stock car racing pay off for him, for the present, anyway. He's the leading driver on the Stateline-Eriez speedways circuit, and also the youngest in the late-model division.

To make stock car racing pay off even better, Ronnie drives in both divisions at Stateline and Eriez, the late-model and sporstmen. He usually finds ished inside the top five in both classes.

Ronnie will be in one of the last lines this Saturday evening at Stateline for the annual Firecracker Fifty, 50 laps of late-model stock car action.

Besides the racing action, the evening will be highlighted by what officials at the track describe as one of the largest—not the largest—fireworks displays in the area.

Stateline officials said the fireworks would be presented right after the 25-lap feature event for sportsmen-class cars.

It will be put on by the same company which was recently chosen to put on a similar display for visiting heads of state at the White House in Washington. "The fireworks will literally be fit for a king," one of official stated.

The Firecracker Fifty itself will have a guaranteed purse of $2,250. The winner will also receive a huge trophy. The Hyle Russell Memorial trophy, won this year by Eddie Kisko of Kane, will be presented before the main event.

Officials also stated that extra bleachers will be installed for the huge throng of fans expected. The new bleachers will be on the first and fourth utrns.

Sammy LaMancuso is the defending champion of the race.

Blackmer, who was listed as a slight favorite here last week to win his second in a row at the main event.

Keeping two racing cars in shape week after week shouldn't be anything to Ruhlman. For a year—two years ago—he had to maintain three late-model racing machines in top condition as he then had three drivers running for him. It paid off as two of his drivers—Ronnie one of them—finished one-two in the final point standings. Dropping from three late-models down to one late-model and a sportsman class car should have been easy.

Last year Ronnie never won a race although he finished fourth in the point standings. He finished third twice but couldn't climb higher. One of his third-place finishes last season was in the Firecracker Fifty.

Sammy LaMancuso of Jamestown was the winner of last season's 50-lapper, the only race he won all season. Sammy, also, has been doing better in the point standings this season, presently tied for fifth with Squirt Johns of Brockway. He has a third and fourth place to his credit already this season, much better than he was doing last year at this time.

One of the reasons that many drivers appear to be doing better this season than last is that the domination of the track by Johns and Bobby Schnars of Busti apparently is at an end.

Johns hasn't won a race yet this season. At this time last year he had won two features (out of six run), taken a second in another and a third in still another. He was inside the top five in the other two, also.

Schnars also had won two features at this point last season, compared with one for this year, the first. He had also taken two seconds but run poorly in other races.

Both Schnars and Johns have finished within the top five in three of the six races run this season. Other drivers, however, seem to be getting past them much easier than they could last year.

The action starts at 8:30 p.m.

Saturday, but the earlier you're there the better seat you'll get for the races and fireworks.

There will be eight preliminary events, a 25-lap feature for sportsmen cars and the 50-lap

Firecracker Fifty.

The following is a list of the point standings including last week's race at Stateline:

Stateline, did just that. He already was leading the rest of the field in points and by winning increased his lead to 56 over his nearest competitor.

Out of six feature races at Stateline this year, Blackmer has finished within the top five four times, winning twice, coming in second once and third once. No other driver at the track has finished in the top five more than three times and there's only four of them.

After winning his second in a row at Stateline Saturday night, Blackmer drove at Eriez the following evening in one of the early races he developed transmission troubles. In an emergency anything goes. In this case it happened to be the transmission out of a car owned by one of the owners of the Erie track. It worked and Blackmer drove in the feature. He finished second, right on the tail of Tom Dill.

State Police Rodeo Preparing for Tour

By JACK LYNCH

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — The Pennsylvania State Police Rodeo, getting ready for its annual one-month tour, is strictly an Eastern version.

Rehearsals for the show are under way now at the academy, under the over-all command of Capt. John E. Tompson, the academy's director of training.

In addition to trick horseback riding and motorcycling, other acts include precision drills by the academy's two dozen horses, which are sometimes used to quell riots; gymnastics; exhibitions with the organization's bloodhounds and other dogs, trick shooting, and clowns.

The show will be put together for the first time July 30 at the Hershey Stadium with the public invited to watch.

The 65-man team will give two rodeo shows daily at Altoona on Aug. 7, Lewistown Aug. 11, Hazleton Aug. 14, Kingston Aug. 18, Scranton Aug. 21 and Hershey Aug. 27.

The rodeo, which has been free to the public since 1938, is not held at any other time during the year, despite constant requests.

"It requires too much preparation and we have to pull men from the various troops," the major explained.

The rodeo, which settled to its present form about 1934, evolved from the field meets the state police held in its early days.

Troopers were mostly mounted officers in those days, so naturally horsemanship was a major part of their training.

NEA Eyes Vote on Race Bias

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP)—Five days of backstage maneuvering end today as the National Education Association takes a showdown vote on desegregation.

The 6,172 official delegates will be asked to vote on a motion that all-white teacher associations in 11 Southern states be given just two years in which to get well under way on integration with Negro associations. In 11 Southern states be given just two years in which to get well under way on integration with Negro associations.

The motion, as an amendment to a leadership-sponsored resolution, is expected to be defeated—but only after a verbal battle which may extend into the evening hours on this convention-ending day.

The lengthy debate here has not been between segregationists on one hand and civil rights proponents on the other. Most of the delegates, including many white teachers from the South, believe that desegregation of the state and local affiliates is desirable and inevitable.

The debate has been on how this can best be brought about.

The "action now" group says, in effect, that the South won't move without the pressure of a deadline. Many of their opponents say an ultimatum will only freeze attitudes and possibly force thousands of NEA members to leave the organization.

Backers of the amendment softened their original position as the vote neared.

Instead of automatic expulsion from the NEA, the amendment was changed to read "the executive committee shall have discretionary powers to take whatever steps are necessary."

Men In Service

Manley J. Fuller, 18, son of Mrs. Geneva E. Fuller of Bear Lake, Pa., has begun basic training at the Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill.

The nine-week training includes naval orientation, history and organization, seamanship, ordnance and gunnery, military drill, first aid and survival.

During the training recruits receive tests and interviews which determine their future assignments in the Navy. Upon completing the program they are assigned to service schools for technical training or to ships and stations for on-the-job training in a Navy rating specialty.

Naval training produces the power in seapower by supplying qualified personnel to man the ships, planes and shore stations of today's Navy.

Chris F. McAmbley, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. McAmbley of 308 Hazel St., Warren, has begun basic training at the Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill.

Navy Lieutenant (jg) Harold V. Petersen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry D. Petersen of Mohawk Ave. ext., Warren, is a crew member of Navy Attack Squadron 192 aboard the Navy attack aircraft carrier USS Bon Homme Richard a unit of the U. S. Seventh Fleet operating in the Far East.

The squadron known as the "Golden Dragons" flies the Navy's smallest jet bomber the "Skyhawk." The squadron recently visited Japan.

Women of Loose Want To Keep Name as It Is

LOOSE, England (AP)—The women of Loose have declined a change of name.

The subject came up at a meeting Thursday of the Loose Women's Institute, Mary Holding presiding.

"It appears that there are suggestions that the village should change to a less peculiar name," Mrs. Holding said.

Loose is in Kent and its name is supposed to derive from several streams which lose themselves underground.

The women's institute voted 57-3 to keep Loose.
